I want you to know how much I enjoyed attending your recent mediation training event. I think the mix of roleplay, critique, discussion, and lecture was excellent, covering all phases of the mediation process in a most practical and stimulating curriculum.

I was struck by the extent to which both experienced and beginning mediators enjoyed and benefitted from the event. The informal and collegial atmosphere contributed enormously to the learning experience and led to a great deal of valuable discussion, both during sessions and breaks, among instructors and participants. The opportunity to explore the means of developing a mediation practice and to network with other mediators was also a strong plus.

I especially found the presentations on commercial and family law mediation a rich source of ideas that I intend to incorporate into both the work of the California Center for Public Dispute Resolution and my teaching at the law school.
