AMERICAN JOURNAL OF MEDIATION

The Editorial Board is continuing to accept article submissions for the American Journal of Mediation. Articles and papers should address current issues relevant to mediation. Submission requirements are available at: American Journal of Mediation. You are encouraged to submit or sponsor law student submission of articles.

The College has engaged William S. Hein & Co., subscription agent and one of the largest distributors of legal periodicals, to fulfill requests for past volumes of the AJM as well as make the articles available through the legal research database.

WEBSITE

The Website -ACCTM.ORG has undergone an update in both appearance and function with the goal of making navigation and searches more user friendly. In addition, links to the National Center for State Courts are available in the NEWS Section State Resources and Alternative Dispute Resolution Database which provides access to a national database of information for each state.

LinkedIn

LinkedIn Groups is a way for organizations and their members to keep in touch allowing discussion of issues that are of common interest. ACCTM has established a Group for Fellows of the College. You have been sent an invitation to connect with and join the Group. You must be a current member of LinkedIn to join the Group. Once you have accepted the invitation to join the Group, you will be able to search, find and contact fellow group members.

Joining either LinkedIn or the ACCTM Group is optional.
